Lammet DuPont For Mr. Hoover

PROSPERITY GENERALLY FOLLOWS REPUBLICAN PARTY SAYS EASTERNER.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 28. — Prosperity generally follows the Republican party, Lammet DuPont, the president of the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Company, said in explaining the reason he would support Herbert Hoover in the coming presidential campaign.

He directed a letter explaining his stand to the Philadelphia Public Ledger today. It was considered significant because his brother, Pierre, recently announced he would support Governor Alfred E. Smith because of the Democratic candidate's prohibition stand.

Lammet DuPont said he agreed generally with the Smith view of the prohibition situation but thought that prosperity, such as he believed would come with a Hoover administration, was of more vital significance than the prohibition question. He said he regretted Hoover's stand on the prohibition question.

TWO WORKMEN OVERCOME BY ESCAPING GAS

LEAKING MAIN RESULTS IN ILLNESS TO GAS CO. EMPLOYEES MONDAY.

MEDICAL AID IS NECESSARY

Raymond Lady Taken To Hospital In Unconscious Condition. John Hilton Overcome Shortly After.

Two men were overcome by gas escaping from a main on the corner of east Washington street and College avenue and a third one almost overcome late Monday afternoon around five o'clock.

Raymond Lady was overcome by the gas and keeled over in the ditch where he was putting on an attachment to enlarge the gas pipe which runs down College avenue. The work has to be done quickly as the gas escapes rapidly and the "shoulder" did not fit on the main as well as was expected. It was said that just before Lady lost consciousness he straightened up and said, "I have about enough of this."

H. E. Burkhalter pulled him out of the ditch and called Dr. Hutcheson, and they took Lady to the County Hospital where he regained consciousness about eight o'clock that evening. It was said that Lady had been gassed during the war in France and this made him all the more susceptible.

H. E. Burkhalter, superintendent of the gas plant, then tried to tighten the fitting. Feeling that the gas was overcoming him he got out of the ditch and sat on the curbing for a time and recovered.

John Hilton who had been working in this same spot during the afternoon was overcome after he went home and Dr. McGaughey was called to attend him.

All the men were reported to be resting well and on the road to recovery. The fitting which caused all the trouble was finally fixed and work was resumed as usual on Tuesday morning.

Raymond Lady was discharged from the Putnam county hospital Tuesday afternoon and returned to his home.

MISS LIBKA FILES SUIT

The kidnaping charge grew out of Miss Libka's story of going to sleep in Indianapolis and waking up in Louisville.

Sunday Movies At Bloomington

For the first time in history, Bloomington's moving picture theaters opened Sunday. Monday it was announced by some of the anti-Sunday movie people, that a fight against the Sunday shows would be made and in all probability a test case will be the result. It will then depend on the court action as to whether or not the Sunday shows there will be continued.

Bloomington and Greencastle were about the only main towns in Indiana where Sunday theaters were not operated, and now that Bloomington has gone for the Sunday shows, Greencastle is about the only one that maintains dark theaters on Sundays. The outcome of the court fight in Bloomington will be watched with much interest here, because the outcome there will probably have a direct bearing on the future in Greencastle.

MANY ATTEND INSTITUTE AT HIGH SCHOOL

150 PUTNAM COUNTY TEACHERS HERE DAILY FOR INSTITUTE PROGRAMS.

GOOD LECTURES HEARD

Prof. Thompson and Prof. Dearborn Deliver Interesting And Instructive Talks Tuesday.

About one hundred and fifty Putnam county teachers are attending the teachers' institute being held in the high school auditorium during this week, the second day of which was opened Tuesday morning by John C. Vermillion, county superintendent of schools.

The lecturers on the program for Tuesday were Prof. Clem O. Thompson and Prof. Frances R. Dearborn. The two lectures given by Prof. Thompson follow, in part:

Modern Trends In Education
A few years ago educators were allied with one of two groups: the culturists or the vocationalists. A glance at the history of education in our country shows that the first school, the Latin Grammar School, established in 1642, was as vocational in motive as any technical school today—it was organized specifically to prepare students for "Ye Gospel."

The discussion has been carried on in a more or less academic fashion until today we are at the place where many are agreed that a broad general education is the best type. Industry does not want specialists. It wants people who know enough about many things that they may become specialists. Brains, not a particular diploma, is demanded.

In 1910, school costs in the United States reached the sum of $426,250,434 or 1.3% of the national income. In 1922 this sum had grown into the billion dollar class, being $1,036,151,209. Yet, this was only 1.48% of our national income. Teachers' salaries have doubled in the last 20 years, and they are too low now. Although our expenditures for school purposes are no higher than they have been for years when we think of the sum relatively, the temper of the taxpayer seems to be against increased school expenditures unless he can feel that he is getting value received.

All of this means that teachers must be better prepared. The schools must prove efficient and the good of the schools must be advertised to the patrons. We must sell education. Educational procedures, once hit and miss practices, more hit than miss according to the stories about the beech rods, is fast becoming a science. In fact nothing short of the scientific attitude can be tolerated in the school room.

No longer is a teaching position to be a place providing for an opportunity for someone to pay a political debt. None but the best qualified teachers must be employed. Results must then be expected.

Doubt Identity Of Burned Body

ANGOLA, Ind., Aug. 28 (UP)—Doubt as to identity of Steuben County's fire death mystery victim exists in the minds of some authorities investigating the case, who believe that Thomas Burke was not the victim and that the body was so identified as a ruse to protect Burke who they believed still alive.

J. F. Waltham, Toledo, Ohio, who identified the body as Burke's is under indictment at Toledo for a bank robbery July 14. Steuben county authorities are giving him considerable attention, as they are puzzled as to how he became so familiar with contents of a travelling bag supposed to have been the property of the dead man.

According to Waltham, Burke served a term with him in a Florida prison. Toledo police say they have no record of Burke in the identification Bureau.

Registration of Sheriff Charles Zimmerman, absent from here when the body was discovered, and who admits he was on a party in Michigan with his deputy, Miss Nellie Coleman, 24, was withdrawn by him Monday at a session of Steuben county commissioners. He expressed a desire to aid in the murder probating, "I want to come back and make good," Zimmerman has four months of his term yet to serve.

G. O. P. HELPS U. S. FARMERS SAYS CURTIS

REPUBLICAN VICE-PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE INVADERS AL SMITH'S OWN STATE.

GUEST OF FARM BUREAU

Senator Curtis Speaks To Syracuse Fair Crowd and Traces Aid Of His Party To Farmers.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 28. (UP)—Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Republican vice-presidential nominee, carried his campaign to Smith territory today with a speech on farm relief at the New York state fair as a guest of the American Farm Bureau.

He traced the Republican party's record on farm legislation in an effort to demonstrate its friendship for agriculture and its ability to solve present farm problems.

The emergency tariff act; the intermediate farm credit act; a measure authorizing organization of farmers' co-operative associations, important amendments to the warehouse act; and other measures have been passed by Republican congresses for the benefit of the farmer, Curtis said.

"Soon after the war, congress fully realized that no class of our population had suffered more by the readjustment of prices from the high points attained during the war than the farmers," he said. The situation was acute and quick relief was required.

"The Republican majority in the House and Senate realized this fact before the expiration of President Wilson's term of office and they passed an emergency tariff act, but this was vetoed by President Wilson on March 3, 1921. The farmers believed that it would be of great help to them if the War Finance corporation could be authorized to extend credits to them, and the Republican congress passed a joint resolution extending the corporation to aid agriculture, but President Wilson vetoed it on January 3, 1921. This measure was passed over his veto.

"When President Harding came into office on March 4, 1921, he and the members of the cabinet and Republican members of congress realized that early action on legislation to relieve the farmers should be had, so the emergency tariff act was passed and signed.

"In the Senate only seven Democrats voted to increase the duty on wheat from thirty to forty cents per bushel. Thirty one Republicans voted for the increase, only two Republicans voted against it and twenty-six Democrats voted against it. Only nine Democrats voted for the final passage of the emergency tariff act and thirty-four Republicans voted for it. Twenty six Democrats and four Republicans voted against it.

"Soon after President Harding was inaugurated a law was enacted authorizing the war finance corporation to extend further credits to aid in carrying and disposing of agricultural products and to provide credit for agricultural purposes.

"The intermediate farm credit act of March 1923 gave to the farmer longer credit, and provided for loans on stock, crops and to co-operative associations. Twelve intermediate credit banks were established just as there were twelve Federal Reserve and twelve Farm Loan banks. Each intermediate credit bank was given $5,000,000 capital, subscribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in the name of the United States.

"Important amendments were made to the Federal warehouse act. The old law covered only cotton, grain, wool, tobacco and flaxseed; the amendments enlarged it to cover all staple farm products designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, and the penalties for violation, which before were insignificant, were made very drastic."

OBSERVE HEALTH LAWS

In the past many parents have failed to realize that there are standards of health above the average which by careful supervision and planning may be attained. Much improvement may be made by knowledge and observance of health laws.

While it is desirable that instruction concerning each child's health be given by the family physician, the state child hygiene physicians are finding hundreds of babies who have not been taken to family physicians because, as the parents said, "they had not noticed anything wrong."

The early signs of "something wrong" only the trained physicians would be likely to recognize.

The suggesting standards toward which we may strive, it is necessary to sound a note of warning to nervous and over-anxious parents who worry and nag their children in trying to have them conform to certain "health rules." The rule must be adapted to the needs of the individual child but the moulding of the child to fit the rule may defeat our purpose. One mother proudly brought a baby for whom she had never varied an ounce or a minute from a schedule meant to be merely suggestive. It did not meet the baby's nutrition needs and lacked certain other essentials. The needed changes were suggested and the mother advised to take the baby periodically to her physician for supervision.

The American Child Health Association has issued a valuable pamphlet on "Signs of Health" which should be very helpful to parents in visualizing each child's possibilities.

In suggestions for the child we find regularity of meals. In early infancy nursing should be offered at regular intervals. With proper prenatal care and attention to the health of the mother after the baby is born, 95% of mothers could insure the baby a right start in life, by nursing it six months to one year.

A scientific study of the child's nutrition requirements indicate certain kinds and amounts of food to be given en at regular intervals. Additions to the baby's diet up to the time for weaning are carefully given so that he may be able to take, after weaning, without disturbance a variety and amount of food adequate for his needs. The small child can easily be taught to eat at times conforming to his growth needs.

The needs of the poorly nourished child, or the premature baby, and of babies suffering from low vitality and of the healthy, robust baby, differ as to feeding intervals and as to the kinds and amounts of food.

In general the needs of robust babies do not vary greatly and so general laws are established.

The usual feeding interval is four hours, though in some cases, other intervals are advised. One grandfather's emphatic inquiry, "Does a baby have to have cereal every morning for breakfast?" suggested a lack of variety in diet coupled with the all too common drama which might well be entitled "A family breakfast" which baby stages each morning as the star actor in the center of a group of admiring relatives.

Too much attention to the act of eating is likely to inhibit both the natural desire for food and the willingness to take it.

TO KEEP FROM GROWING OLD
The following hints are given by the Hoosier State Automobile Association for motorists who wish to keep from growing old:

Always race with locomotives.
Always race with locomotives crossings. Engineers like to see the monotony of their jobs.

Always pass the car ahead of you. Don't see your own car. Unnerv the other fellow and let him to turn out too far.
Demand half the road—the half. Insist on your rights.
Always speed; it shows you are a man of pep even though your driver.

Never stop, look or listen at a railroad crossing. It causes skidding. It makes the job of the driver.

Always pass cars on hills. You have more power and can turn out if you meet a car at the top.
Never look around when you are passing.
Drive confidently, just as if there were not twenty-three million cars in service.

Rheumatism And Stomach Trouble Ended By Konjola

"This Medicine Delivered Me From Years of Suffering," She States.

MRS. EMMA HELMS

"I know what Konjola will do for anyone who suffers from stomach troubles and rheumatism as this medicine delivered me from years of suffering," said Mrs. Emma Helms, Centerville, Ind. (near Hammond.)

"The rheumatic pains affected my arms and legs," continued Mrs. Helms. "The joints of my knees and elbows were so stiff and aching I could hardly sleep at night, and I would be in misery all day. My ankles were swollen. During the night I was subject to constant risings because of weak kidneys. My whole system was terribly rundown."

"I was impressed with the reports of relief other sufferers were getting from Konjola so I decided to get some. Before I finished two bottles the pains began easing up and as I continued with the treatment, they disappeared completely, and have never returned. My kidney trouble is gone and my stomach is back to normal. This medicine has benefited me in every way and I heartily recommend it to others."

Konjola is sold in Greencastle at the Owl Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. —(Adv.)
